Current Comment

Looking back over the three years of his first term President Hoover may have the satisfaction of knowing that in the face of almost unparalleled difficulties he has to his credit many distinct and positive achievements, both in the matter of his domestic and foreign policies. In the foreign field the London Conference for the restriction of naval armaments which he initiated, resulted in agreements which have saved the taxpayers of the four great naval powers literally billions of dollars by bringing to an end the race for naval supremacy which, but for this conference, undoubtedly would have continued indefinitely. His dramatic pronouncement for a debts, and reparations, moratorium was held in every country as an act of supreme world leadership. Ramsay MacDonald declared: "The whole face of the world was changed in half an hour by the announcement of President Hoover's offer," and he added, "history will pronounce this decision as an act of rare courage and statesmanship." Similar commendation came from other European countries for all recognized that the moratorium in all probability prevented the collapse of Germany which would have brought with it financial and political chaos throughout Europe.

At home there is no question that the President's position was chiefly, if not wholly responsible for maintaining wages many months after they would normally have been drastically reduced and that his attitude had much to do, if not everything to do, with the fact that for the first time in the case of any major depression there has been no disturbance growing out of disputes between labor and capital. It was the President also who initiated extraordinary expenditures for construction, not only in the matter of Federal public works, but in the case of similar undertakings carried on by the various states and by the great corporations, as a result of which hundreds of thousands of men have been given steady employment who otherwise would have been idle. In all these matters it is to be remembered that the President was striking out a new trail, that he was making a direct contribution to the solution of economic problems such as no other president had ever offered or undertaken. It is perhaps too early as yet to forecast the results of the great constructive measures which, with the patriotic cooperation of Congress, the President has been able to put into effect. But the slowing down of bank closings and other business failures which has been marked during the past two weeks, the return of vast sums of money to circulation which has been hoarded through lack of confidence on the part of the people, and the reports from every section of the country as to the salutary effects of the organizations that have been made for the expansion of credit, such as the Bankers Credit Pool, the Recon-

DAVID KEESLING CAUSES ANXIETY

Little David Keesling, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Keesling of Hamilton avenue, gave his family a scare last Friday when he got tired of waiting for his mother at a Grange Auxiliary meeting at a ranch some distance from his home.

David was missed shortly after the meeting began, and a frantic search failed to reveal his whereabouts. Rev. J. H. Bennett and others organized a search party, but failed to locate the missing lad, and just as the police were about to be summoned a phone call came from the Keesling home over a mile away, reporting that little David had been sighted, heading for home.

MEXICAN FRUIT FLY APPEARS IN TEXAS: CALIF. ON GUARD

Sacramento, March 15—With the discovery of several light infestations of the Mexican fruit fly in Texas, federal and state authorities moved today to guard against the pests being brought into California.

While Dudley Moulton, director of the state department of agriculture, ordered the confiscation of Texas citrus fruits found in automobiles or ships entering California, federal authorities established quarantine regulations to control the shipments of citrus fruits from the infested areas in Texas.

California's border quarantine officers were instructed by A. C. Fleury, chief quarantine officer to seize and immediately destroy all Texas citrus fruits being brought into the state, as a precautionary measure. Heretofore Texas citrus fruits have been barred from shipment into California because of the citrus canker, but the owner was given an opportunity to ship the fruit out of the state.

"Introduction of the Mexican fruit fly into California would result in serious economic loss to growers and would necessitate heavy expenditures for control measures, once it gained a foothold in this state," Director Moulton said. "The pest attacks all deciduous as well as citrus fruits, consequently every possible precaution must be taken to prevent this pest from entering the state."

Under federal regulations, the Mexican fly host fruits must be sterilized before they may be shipped from the infested area in Texas to localities believed susceptible to infestation by the Mexican fruit worm.

A number of infestations have been found in Cameron, Willacy and Hidalgo counties in Texas.

LAW RECOVERS STOLEN AUTO

Constable Frank Coupland and Patrolman Harry Evans recovered a stolen car Thursday night, and reported its recovery to headquarters just as the theft was reported by the owner, J. A. Krebs of Burbank.

The officers made an attempt to stop the car as it sped through Campbell without lights, but the driver refused to stop. Coupland and Evans started in pursuit, and caught up with the car where it had been run into a tree near dry creek. The thieves escaped down the creek bed.

GRANGERS HEAR C. M. SMITH OF "SUNSHINE CLUB"

Worthy Master W. H. Woodbury presided over the business meeting of the Orchard City Grange last Tuesday evening at the I. O. O. F. hall. A report was given by the building committee which covered a part of their activities toward the construction of a Grange hall here. A general discussion followed the report. Other business was taken care of, and other reports considered.

During the lecture hour Mrs. Jessie McChesney introduced C. M. Smith, president and general manager of the "Golden Sunshine Club of California," who outlined for the Grange the objects and methods of procedure used by the club. He also told how this organization is being helpful to the fruit industry in California.

Following the talk by Mr. Smith, A. H. Bihn was introduced, and talked on successful methods of incubating, brooding, feeding, and care of chicks to maturity. He also included a few pointers on profitable egg production. Both talks were interesting and instructive, and greatly enjoyed by the local Grangers.

Jim Dempsey acted as chairman.

Prof. W. H. Paytress of San Jose State college will talk on the Asiatic Problems at next Tuesday's luncheon and Nic Hedegard will take the baton, directing the dance of the geisha.

Roosevelt Defeats Smith in New Hampshire Primaries —Billion Dollar Tax Bill Under Debate in the House.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHEN the new tax bill designed to raise $1,100,000,000 in increased revenues had been presented to the house, several complications arose that promised considerable debate. Three Democratic members of the ways and means committee submitted a minority report urging that about one-third of the sum be obtained by legalizing and taxing 2.75 per cent beer. These congressmen were T. H. Cullen and C. D. Sullivan of New York, and J. W. McCormack of Massachusetts. They said they failed to understand a point of view which complacently accepts the taxation of illegal brewing and wine making through the levies proposed in the present bill on malt sirup, wort, and grape concentrate, yet refuses to agree with a legal tax on legally made beer. Restoration of the brewing industry, they argued further, would put thousands of jobless back to work.

Representative J. W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, a Republican, presented strong objections to the proposed import levy on gasoline and oil, and he indicated that his opposition to this feature was shared by many representatives from states along the Atlantic seaboard.

WITH only thirteen opposing votes the house passed the La Guardia anti-injunction bill after seven hours of debate in which but two men spoke against the measure. The La Guardia bill differed in minor particulars from the Norris bill passed by the senate, so the legislation went to conference.

When it becomes law the "yellow dog" contracts which bind workers not to organize will no longer be recognized and federal judges will be limited stringently in their powers to quiet labor disputes by injunction. Above these mandates the act declares the policy of the nation is to favor labor's right to organize and bargain collectively.

PUSHED off the front page by the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, the Sino-Japanese embroglio still held first place among international affairs. The truce at Shanghai did not last more than a few hours, and though Gen. Tsai Ting-kai and his army had been pushed back further than the Japanese originally demanded, the invaders, strengthened by fresh troops and more guns, insisted on further Chinese withdrawals. They extended their lines day by day, and some of their officers declared it was their intention to move toward Nanking at least as far as Changchow, which is 120 miles northwest of Shanghai. Meanwhile, it was reported, large numbers of Chinese soldiers were being added to General Tsai's forces, and in consequence General Shirakawa, Japanese commander, issued a warning that he would reopen hostilities if the Chinese attempted to enter the 40 mile line held by the Japanese.

Gen. Tsai Ting-kai

As was foreseen, the smaller powers in the League of Nations assembly tried to force the league to take drastic action against Japan, and were blocked by the great powers, which would be the ones directly affected by such a course. For them Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, proposed the league should again remind Japan of her treaty covenant obligations, restating Secretary Stimson's declaration that advantages gained by force cannot be recognized; should take the stand that Shanghai will be cared for by the great powers, and that the Manchurian problem should be shelved for the present. The debate was rather warm, but finally a committee was appointed to draft a resolution expressing the league's attitude and intentions.

PRESIDENT HOOVER, recognizing the popular demand for economies in government expenditures, announced that the entire administrative staff was co-operating with congress in trying to cut down federal costs by reorganization, but the house Democrats working on the economy plans were not satisfied. Chairman Byrns of the special economy committee called for more specific suggestions from the President. He said the only administration official who had volunteered assistance was Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the veterans' administration, who proposed "reductions in payments the bureau is now making to certain classes of disabled veterans."

"Surely the President," says Mr. Byrns, "has had this information for some time and the question naturally arises why he did not take the responsibility in his message last December of recommending this legislation which he would now have the country understand he approves without stating just what it is."

The senate didn't help the economy plans much, for it passed the agriculture bill after adding $2,015,954 to the appropriations authorized by the house. The total of the measure as it left the senate and went to conference was $177,424,768. Senators McKellar, King and Tydings tried in vain to knock large sums out of the figure; even the $1,450,000 item for grasshoppers control was retained.

FIRST blood in the contest between Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith for the Democratic nomination for President goes to the governor of New York. The opening round of the battle was provided by the New Hampshire preferential primaries, and Mr. Roosevelt captured the Granite State's eight delegates for his forces in the national convention.

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Unofficial returns showed the Roosevelt pledged candidates were elected by a margin of approximately 4,500. Since the candidates were voted for separately, the individual totals varied slightly. Four district delegates were elected, two from each congressional district, and each of these delegates will have a full vote.

A lighter vote than was expected in the cities to which the Smith forces looked for their greatest strength, together with a rural vote generally favorable to Roosevelt, combined to make the result. The vote of the state's eleven cities was divided almost evenly between the Smith and Roosevelt slates and the 224 towns furnished the majority by which the governor's ticket carried the state.

The Smith candidates for delegates at large carried only three cities, Keene, Berlin and Manchester.

An unopposed Republican ticket, pledged to President Hoover, was elected. It consisted of seven delegates at large and four district delegates.

The Roosevelt victory was expected to have an important bearing on the Massachusetts primary on April 26. Smith has given consent to the use of his name there and a ticket of candidates for delegates has been prepared. Roosevelt supporters predicted a Roosevelt ticket would be entered against the Smith slate in Massachusetts.

Next came the Minnesota Democratic state convention to choose delegates to the national gathering. Smith and Roosevelt supporters quarreled fiercely and the former, finding themselves in the minority, bolted and held a convention of their own which picked a delegation that will vote for Smith in Chicago though uninstructed. The regular delegation was instructed to support Roosevelt.

COLONEL LINDBERGH'S baby has not been returned, at this writing, nor has the identity of the kidnapers been made known. This despite the efforts of all agencies in the land, from the federal government down to leaders of the underworld. Negotiations for contact with the criminals are reported to have been put in the hands of Morris Rosner, a mysterious figure of New York, and current stories say the restoration of the child and payment of the ransom have been delayed by fear of the abductors that they may be trapped. Officials in charge of the case declared they were "still making progress," and privately some of them said they were sure the baby was safe and well and would be returned to his parents after the excitement had subsided.

IN THE opinion of the war policies commission, congress should have authority in time of war to fix prices in order to prevent profiteering. This was a vital part of the report made to the President by the commission and a constitutional amendment to that effect was introduced in the senate by Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, a member of the commission. It was referred to the judiciary committee.

Senator Vandenberg

The proposed amendment calls for an addition to the existing Fifth amendment, providing that "in time of war congress may regulate or provide for the regulation of prices, rent, or compensation to be exacted or paid by any person in respect of the sale, rent, or use of any real or personal property, tangible or intangible, without regard to any limitation contained in this article or any other article of the Constitution."

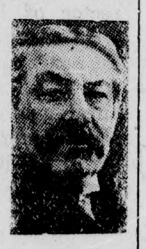
Should corporations or persons succeed in evading such a price fixing regulation, the commission suggests a further check on profits by recommending a 95 per cent tax on all income in time of war in excess of the average income of the preceding three years.

EAMON DE VALERA is now the president of the Irish Free State. He was elected to succeed William T. Cosgrave by the dail eireann and took office at once. Of the seats in the assembly De Valera's Fianna Fail party holds 72. The Cosgrave party has 56, the Laborites 7 and the Independents, who usually vote with Cosgrave, 17. So De Valera governs only with the help of the Labor party, which demands that economic and social legislation be given the precedence. Cosgrave retired from power gracefully, stating that he and his party would go into opposition, but would not unduly hamper the new president. It appears that De Valera was still determined to try to expunge the oath of allegiance to the British king. Whether the Cosgrave following would vote against this or merely refrain from voting was uncertain.

W. T. Cosgrave

INSTIGATED, it was alleged, by William Z. Foster and other Communists, more than three thousand jobless men and women tried to storm the Rouge River plant of the Ford Motor company in Detroit. With rocks and clubs they fought fiercely with the police and firemen called out to restrain them, and tear gas bombs did not avail to stop them, because a high wind carried off the fumes. Forced back to the gates of the plant, the police finally fired three volleys from riot guns, and the mob took to flight. It was found that four persons had been killed and more than fifty injured. Among the latter was Harry Bennett, chief of the Ford service department, who was severely beaten. Foster and the other Communist leaders took no part in the riot and afterward could not be found by the authorities. Prosecutor Harry S. Toy of Detroit said he was considering placing criminal syndicalism charges before the grand jury.

FRANCE and the world lost a great figure in the death of Aristide Briand, foremost European apostle of international amity. Worn out by his long years of arduous labor, he succumbed to uremic poisoning. He was accorded a state funeral, but in accordance with his last wish he was quietly buried at Cocherel, his country place. M. Briand, who was nearly seventy years old, had been premier 12 times, and over and over again had held the post of foreign minister. He was for long a brilliant and active figure in French and international affairs, and his efforts to re-establish friendly relations between his country and Germany were untiring. He led in the forging of the Locarno pact in 1925 and co-operated with Frank B. Kellogg in creating the anti-war treaty that bears their names. Being an idealist, he proposed the "United States of Europe," which is still a matter of discussion among the nations of the Old world. Germany recognized that in Briand's passing her best friend in other lands had gone.



Aristide Briand

The United States mourns the death of John Philip Sousa, its most famous band master and "march king," whose music has been an inspiration and a delight to several generations of Americans. For twelve years he was leader of the Marine Corps band, and then he organized his own noted band with which he toured the world. During the war he was musical director at Great Lakes.

FINLAND'S rebellion came to a sudden end with the surrender of the leaders of the Lapua movement. The would-be revolutionists, evacuated Mantsala, marched to the garrison town of Tusby and laid down their arms. Their chieftains were put in prison and probably will be tried for high treason. As is so often the case, it is suspected that the rebellion was financed by the Communist International.

REPORTS from all parts of the country tell of the success attending the efforts of the Citizens Reconstruction organization, headed by Frank Knox of Chicago, in getting hoarded money back into trade channels and thus helping to restore public confidence.

YOSEMITE FALLS BREAK RECORDS

Yosemite's numerous water falls, among the world's highest, will attain greater volume this year than they have had for 18 years, according to reports received by the National Automobile club from Chief Ranger Forrest S. Townsley, who has lived there since 1914.

The 165-inch snowfall (twice the normal for this region) and the higher-than-average water content of the snow will keep the waterfalls flowing at full volume much later this summer than is customary, Townsley predicts. Warm, spring like weather has already started the run-off, and soon California's irrigation systems will be full to capacity for the first time in several seasons.

The Junior Intermediate Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church held a baked ham supper at the church Friday evening. Mrs. S. N. Hedegard was in charge of the supper, which was followed by an enjoyable program featuring the Keesling band, Barton and Katherine Wood, Ernest Felice, Emily and Lois Bohnett and Edna Marie Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. George Parso entertained a number of friends at dinner Saturday night at their home on Hamilton avenue.

No passage in the Bible justifies the common belief that all the descendants of Benjamin were left-handed. The tribe of Benjamin was always the smallest of the tribes of Israel and left-handedness seems to have been more common among them than among other people. Judges 20:15, 16 says: "And the children of Benjamin were numbered at that time out of the cities twenty and six thousand men that drew sword, beside the inhabitants of Gibeah, which were numbered seven hundred chosen men. Among all this people there were seven hundred chosen men left-handed; every one could sling stones at a hair breadth, and not miss." Judges 3:15 says in part: "But when the children of Israel cried unto the Lord, the Lord raised them up a deliverer, Ehud the son of Gera, a Benjaminite, a man left-handed." I Chron. 12:2 indicates that they were ambidextrous: "They were armed with bows, and could use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones and shooting arrows out of a bow, even of Saul's brethren of Benjamin."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Possible to Read by Light Mushroom Gives

Reading by the light of mushrooms is a novel experience. A striking phenomenon shown by certain fungi is luminosity of phosphorescence, according to Vera K. Charles, pathologist of the United States Department of Agriculture, and an Australian species of mushrooms is said to give out such a clear, emerald-green light that it is possible to read by it. The phosphorescence sometimes noticed in dead wood is caused by the underground or vegetative part of the mushrooms, which often gives off a bright glow that may be seen from some distance. Phosphorescence is sometimes shown by the mushroom itself, as in the cases of Clitocybe illudens, commonly known as jack-o'-lantern, and Panus stypticus, a very common species. Phosphorescence in mushrooms has been the basis in some countries for fairy stories and superstitions about ghosts.

Wanted Her Rights

An insurance agent called upon Mrs. Potter for her weekly premium, and she informed him of her intention to remove immediately. "And when may I expect the van?" she added. Not quite understanding the question, the agent asked her for an explanation, and eventually discovered that a furniture van was what was required. "Yes," continued Mrs. Potter, "the company does all that, you know, free of charge." "The company!" gasped the agent. "Furniture van—free!" "Look here," said the lady, with an air of finality. "Here's a list of your own rules—'Members removing from one district to another will be transferred free of charge'!"—London Tit-Bits.

Old Prohibitory Laws

"One is apt to think of our times as too much ridden with prohibitory laws of all sorts," observes a writer in a Vancouver (B. C) paper. "Other days also suffered, for in turning the pages of history one finds that King William II of England and English-American colonies signed a law that 'no person may use or sell any buttons made of cloth, serge, drugget, frieze or camlet, on pain of paying 40 shillings for every dozen.'

"Manufacturers of metal buttons at the time happened to have had great political influence and used it. For the same reason, Queen Anne prohibited wooden buttons."

Indians of Mixed Blood

The Mohican Indians of whom James Fenimore Cooper wrote in the "Last of the Mohicans" were a group of tribes of Algonquin Indians which formerly lived in Connecticut and New York. Many of the Mohicans lost their identity by mingling with the Delaware, Iroquois and other tribes of Indians, but notwithstanding Cooper's story, mixed blood remnants still survive in the vicinity of Norwich, Conn., and Stockbridge, Mass. The notorious Pequots were a renegade group of the original Mohicans.—Detroit News.

Bird Victim of Fashion

The kittiwake, a member of the gull family that inhabits the Arctic regions of Europe and North America, takes its name from its queer, plaintive cry. These birds grow to a length of from 16 to 18 inches, and are generally white with bluish gray back and wings, yellow beaks and legs of brownish black. They have been ruthlessly slaughtered on the British islands for the millinery trade.

Automobile "Driven"

An automobile is neither pushed nor pulled. Pushing and pulling implies some outside force. An automobile is driven. The driving power is produced by an internal combustion engine mounted on its own frame, and the power for driving purposes is transmitted to the rear wheels through an appropriate mechanism.

Explain Evolution as Result of Inner Urge

Aristogenesis, sprung by Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn on the National Academy of Sciences at Yale, seems to be a modification of what some biologists have been calling orthogenesis for years. By orthogenesis is meant evolution in straight lines.

Those who believe in this view have made much of the horse, the camel and the titanothere in proving that there is direction in evolution. Thus millions of years ago, when they were about as big as St. Bernard dogs, horses started to get rid of their toes and to lengthen their legs. They began with five toes and wound up with one. They raised themselves on stilts, as it were, and grew bigger and speedier in the process. What made the horse change? Not his surroundings, apparently, nor any definite organic advantage. So Professor Osborn and those who hold with him explain evolution as a result of some inner urge to change in a particular way. Natural selection then proceeds to standardize the species.

Opponents of Professor Osborn and orthogenesis argue that there are very few examples of straight-line evolution. There are, for example, abortive fossil horses in South America—creatures that thickened their limbs and spread out the hoof. There are also abortive titanotheres.

Equally puzzling are creates (mollusks, for example) that evolved along lines that led to extinction. Neither old-fashioned Darwinism nor orthogenesis can tell us why.

This Probably Was New York's First Roadhouse

It must have been New York's first roadhouse. Mention of it was made in an advertisement that appeared in the New York Packet on May 23, 1785, which informed the public that Talmadge Hall had fitted up the "elegant house on Haerlem Heights" owned by Isaac Ledyard "for the accommodation of ladies and gentlemen from town, as well as gentlemen travelers," and had gathered together "ready and obedient servants and the best fare that the country and town affords." The advertisement went on in this fashion:

"Parties from town, and travelers, may be served with breakfasts, dinners, suppers, relishes, tea, punch, etc., at ten minutes' notice. He (Hall) keeps the choicest liquors, and promises that his guests shall have the most prompt attendance. He has provided also genteel lodgings, stablings and pasture.

"The Octagon room is very happily calculated for a turtle party and his guests shall have for deserts peaches, apricot, pears, gooseberries, nectarines, cherries, currants and strawberries in their seasons."—New York Sun.

Old Lighthouse

Cape Florida lighthouse was built in 1825-26 by the federal government. It was not of Spanish origin, although its somewhat dilapidated appearance has no doubt given rise to the belief that it dates back to the days of Spanish occupation. The tower was partly destroyed by Indians in July, 1836. It was not again relighted until the old tower was demolished and a new tower built in 1846-47. In 1861 the lighting apparatus was destroyed by a band of lawless persons, and the light was not relighted until April, 1866. The light was finally discontinued in June, 1878, when Fowey Rocks light was first exhibited.

Had 'Em on Wrong Limb

Mrs. Nitwit giggled once too often during dinner, and the head of the house insisted on knowing the reason for his wife's mirth.

"It's just another joke on the absent-minded Miss Blank," she told him. "We had a rummage sale at our club this afternoon and right in the middle of it, in marched Miss Blank with a pair of wet stockings over one arm. She said she had rinsed them out, hung them over a radiator and then decided she ought to put them some place else since she was going out. So she took them down, draped them on one arm and forgot they were there until she got to the club."—New York Sun.

American Privateers

Channing's History says: "More than 2,000 American privateers ranged the seas at one time or another. They swarmed in the West Indies, they cruised along the Atlantic coasts, they sought their prey in the British channel and the North sea. . . . In 1781 the Cabots of Beverley received 600,000 rials of vellon for their half share in five prizes, the Gardoquis getting the rest. The Derbys of Salem got over $60,000 on account of prizes that were sold at Bilbao."

Credit Is Marconi's

The invention of the radio broadcasting system as now used is the work of several men, but Marconi's application of the wireless telegraph to practical purposes usually is regarded as the primary impulse which set other inventors to working on refinements resulting in what is now known as radio.

struction Finance Corporation, and the broadening of the credit base of the Reserve banks, gives us every reason to believe that confidence is being rapidly restored—and a return of confidence is the beginning of a return of good times.

Aftter many years of agitation the people of the 48 states of the Union are at last to have an opportunity to say whether they want a newly elected Congress to meet two months after it is chosen or 13 months, and whether they want a newly elected President to assume office January or in March. The people will have this opportunity through the passage of a resolution by Congress submitting what is known as the "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution. This amendment would provide that the newly chosen Congress shall meet Jan. 4 following the election and that the newly elected President shall be inaugurated Jan. 20.

The present arrangement by which a new Congress and a new President begin their term of service March 4 following the election dates back of course to the ancient days when all transportation was by stagecoach or worse, and a time allowance of three or four months had to be made in order that men from outlying states could reach the capital. It does seem somewhat ridiculous now to make such a time allowance when the continent can be crossed in four days. It seems particularly absurd that a new Congress elected early in November should not take its seat, unless called into special session, until 13 months later. The new amendment proposes merely to gear up government machinery to modern transportation. The amendment will be transmitted by the Secretary of State to all state Governors and will become effective when 36 states have ratified it.

The latest statement of the Federal Reserve Board is the most optimistic it has given out in many weeks. It reports improved banking conditions, a steady decline in the amount of hoarded money, no gold shipped abroad for a week, a sharp decline during the last half of February in business failures, a steady tone in the bond market for the second consecutive week, increased production in steel and automobile centers, increased carloadings and numerous other hopeful business indications. Along the same line comes a report that the American cotton supply in January was reduced by 1,345,000 bales, a larger export movement than in the same months for the last two years.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson and daughter Helen of San Francisco, Miss Frances Channing of Denver and Charles Frazier of Los Angeles were visitors at the W. C. Grizzle home Sunday.

Carl Field is transacting business in San Francisco today.

Dick Fletcher of Porterville is visiting friend in Campbell this week.

A SPRING Tonic Tune-up is a good thing for your Ford—and we are experts at prescribing the right medicine and the right treatment for anything that can possibly go wrong in a Ford.

The Ford car has a steel constitution—but heavy carbon deposits, carburetor or distributor out of adjustment, worn-out oil or grease, or unevenly adjusted shock absorbers are enough to make any car feel low.

Let us make a thorough examination. There's no charge for that—and as we fill the prescription ourselves, its cost is very low.
